Crime: social disorganization and relative deprivation ... 1.. Introduction Crime is a social mirror. A long tradition in criminological research suggests that crime is most prevalent in societies that permit large disparities in the material standards of living of its citizens (Hsieh and Pugh, 1993; Kawachi et al., 1994). If the level of crime is an indicator of the health of society, then the US provides an illustrative case study as one of the most ...
